WHY BE THE GOAT

every time you light your pipe?

Smoke a tobacco that meets the INDOOR TEST

It's really good taste to smoke BOND STREET.

You get the rich, mellow flavor and bite-free coolness of a custom blend. And—unlike other popular mixtures—BOND STREET leaves no stale pipe odors in the room. The ladies applaud!

BOND STREET contains a rare aromatic tobacco never before used in any popular priced blend.

It's genuinely aromatic. And here's one pipe tobacco that doesn't lose its flavor. Try it—today!

15¢

POCKET PACKAGE
Convenient folding Pocket Pouch—10¢

BOND STREET
PIPE TOBACCO
A product of PHILIP MORRIS

RELIGION

Nudging Discouraged

"The Church has no special competence in the field of politics. . . . The function of the Church is not to write the constitution for a post-war world, nor to nudge the statesmen who try to do this."

Thus last week, in a voice at wide variance from many others in the church, spoke the tall, affable Rev. Daniel A. McGregor of the Episcopal Church's National Council, addressing New York Episcopal clergymen.

Dr. McGregor went on to clarify his suggestion that the best efforts of the church might now be spiritual rather than temporal. He advised the church to "nurture in domestic life those patterns in which we really believe, and to hold the faith that if these patterns are deeply imbedded . . . they will provide the seed from which the international patterns will grow."

He offered an immediate three-point program: 1) the church must "insist that there is a God Who is the final authority over life"; 2) develop "international life . . . by strengthening her missions work"; 3) "find a new pattern of interracial relationships. . . . Men and women of all races are one family in Christ."

In his office next day, Dr. McGregor found congratulatory letters and telegrams. He was embarrassed to note that many came from stout political conservatives. Known as a liberal for many years, Dr. McGregor hoped that in urging the church away from politics he was not aiding political conservatism.

Army & Navy See

Fastest-growing diocese in the whole Roman Catholic Church is the U.S. Diocese of the Army & Navy. Head of this world-sprawled See, with the title of Military Vicar, is New York's genial Archbishop Francis J. Spellman. Since he must shepherd over a million of the faithful in his own Archdiocese, the real work of the Army & Navy Diocese falls on his military delegate, lanky, Spanish-speaking Bishop John F. O'Hara, onetime president of Notre Dame. And Bishop O'Hara is so busy that last week the Pope gave him an assistant. He is the Most Rev. William T. McCarty, 53, of Brooklyn, who has inaugurated 14 Redemptorist* foundations in the U.S., Puerto Rico, Brazil. Biggest new job of Pennsylvania-born Bishop-Designate McCarty will be to help eliminate a serious shortage of Catholic chaplains.

Army & Navy Diocese marriages run about 3,000 a month. Now that the Church permits afternoon and evening Masses, soldiers and sailors can get to services more often. Result: 70% of the Catholic personnel in the armed forces go faithfully to Sunday Mass.

* The Redemptorists are a society of missionary priests founded in 1732 to work among country folk near Naples, Italy. Now their work is worldwide.

2061033474

43

Source: https://www.industrydocuments.ucsf.edu/docs/yrcv0004

2061033474